Martin University

On Sunday, May 4, 2008, at 2:00 p.m. Martin University will graduate its largest graduating class. The ages of graduates ranges from 23 – 85. Each student in this graduating class has a unique story to describe their journey. One such story is about Ms. Kandis Williams. Ms. Williams came to Martin University in December of 2005 after being displaced by Hurricane Katrina in New Orleans. She attended college two other times before enrolling at Martin but never finished. Two and a half years later, Ms. Williams achieves her dream by graduating on May 4 with a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Administration.

Martin University is an accredited private institution of higher education that does not receive money from the United Negro College Fund (UNCF) or the Historically Black College & University (HBCU) fund because of its founding date. Martin University's vision is to become a premier university continuing to serve low-income, people of color and adult learners in a nurturing, healing, freedom-minded environment. Martin University provides educational opportunities for ordinary persons so that they may become citizen leaders.
